

Parts of the Computer: What the Heck???

Mr. Hesseltine is NOT as fast as this guy!!!

CPU or Central Processing Unit

- Sends and receives binary messages at high rates of speed.
- This unit operates off of binary code.
- Acts as the brain of the computer.

Hard Drive or Hard Disk

- Made of Multiple Metallic Platters
- Internal Storage
- Is Measured in Bytes

Motherboard

- Looks kind of like a city.
- Parts are located in specific areas to work faster.
- All the key parts of the computer are connected to this device.

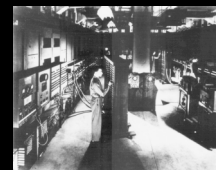

Billy Gates

- Arrested in NM for Speeding
- Co Founder of Microsoft
- One of the Richest People on the Rock

ENIAC

- Devised for Use in World War II
- Consisted of 18,000 Bulbs
- Took Up an Entire Room

The Power Supply

- Has Fans to Pull Air Away from It
- Supplies Power to Computer

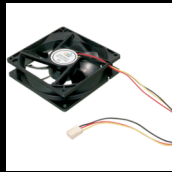

Ribbon Cable

- Connects Hardware to the Motherboard
- Used to Communicate Between Devices

Cooling Fan

- Pulls Hot Air AWAY from Computer
- Used to Keep Computer Cool

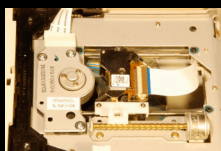

Paul Allen

- Has Partial Ownership in the Seattle Seahawks (NFL) and Portland Trailblazers (NBA)
- Went to College with Bill Gates
- Co Founder of Microsoft

CD or DVD Player

- Reads Binary Code
- Transfers the Code to Audio or Video

Steve Wozniak

- Perfected the First Computer with the Graphic User Interface (GUI) or Mouse
- Co Founder of Apple Computers

The Battery

- Used to Retain Preset Settings
- Does NOT Run the Computer When the Power Goes Off

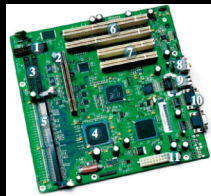

RAM or Random Access Memory

- Memory Sticks That Usually Work in Pairs
- Memory That Runs Any Programs That You Have Opened
- Too Many Programs Opened at Once Can Slow This Memory Down

Expansion Slots

- Allows You to Add Extra Features to Your Computer
- Video and Sound Cards, and RAM Can All Be Updated Here

Steve Jobs

- Named a Computer He Built "Lisa" after His Daughter
- Sold His Car to Make Money to Build a Computer
- Co Founder of Apple

The Keyboard

- Sometimes Called "QWERTY"
- Back in the Day Was Arranged to Slow People Down to Stop it From Jamming
- An Input Device

Who are these guys???

